

LYME DISEASE TRAINING FOR AUSTRALIA Lyme-Ed

Patients need trained practitioners

Recognising an overwhelming need for patients to receive treatment the Lyme Disease Association of Australia (LDAA) is making Lyme disease training available online to Australian patients, carers and practitioners.

LDAA has partnered with Dr Nicola Ducharme the creator of Lyme-Ed to make it possible for compassionate practitioners to treat Lyme and Lyme-like illness in Australia and for patients to understand their situation.

Course content and structure

Lyme-Ed is easy to navigate with 20 hours of online training covering 10 modules plus access to supporting files and resources. It is possible to do each module sequentially or jump to what is of most interest or the biggest need.

The training addresses the nuances that patient and practitioners often face: what to do if antibiotics stop working; why detoxification is so crucial; how to best support it and 10 key factors that can hinder recovery.

Dr Nicola Ducharme

Dr Nicola Ducharme is a Naturopathic Doctor who trained as a naturopath in her home country of Australia. She then earned her Doctorate in Naturopathic Medicine from the prestigious Bastyr University in Seattle, moving to San Diego in 2003 to start her private practice. As founder and medical director of RestorMedicine, she specialises in working with individuals with chronic Lyme disease.

Dr. Nicola has written four books on the subject of Lyme disease - The Lyme Diet, The Beginners Guide to Lyme Disease, Lyme Disease in Australia and Lyme Brain, and has been featured as a Lyme expert in Connie Strasheim's books on Lyme disease.

How to enrol

Once enrolled trainees receive lifetime access. The patient and carer version is available for US$197 and the practitioner version US$397.
